Administration of Justice (JUS) D390

Designed for in-service personnel and pre-service officers, the Administration of Justice program offers students a chance to learn what it is really like in the world of law and order.

Such a degree can lead to positions in police departments, correctional facilities, the courts, probation and parole offices, working with juveniles and even private enforcement agencies that often specialize in security or investigation. There are also jobs, in almost all federal agencies, as these offices have enforcement branches vital to everyday functions.

Opportunities are dependent, of course, upon recruiting standards of each particular agency. Students should see an advisor for this program.

Security and Loss Prevention (JUS) C394

The Security and Loss Prevention Certificate prepares students for the security/loss prevention employment field which includes positions such as gaming surveillance/investigators, security guards, loss prevention experts, detectives and criminal investigators. After two semesters of full-time classes, students will be prepared to enter the workforce in any of the above mentioned fields. in correctional institutions.

Advanced Degrees

Students who plan to transfer to colleges or universities to earn a bachelor's degree in Administration of Justice typically complete an Associate in Science and Arts Degree at OCC. These students can complete several Administration of Justice courses and general education courses, which will apply toward requirements for the Administration of Justice baccalaureate degree at the transfer institution.

Learn from Professionals

The Administration of Justice courses are taught by individuals who are active in the criminal justice system and have considerable experience in the law enforcement field. They bring practical knowledge to the classroom — a great asset in training students in law enforcement.
